Elderly woman brutalized by purse snatcher

Investigation.

Man breaks arm of 87-year-old after pushing her to the ground: Cops

JOE
LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

Police are looking for help solving two purse-snatching incidents last week.

In the most recent incident, May 8, they say an 87-year-old woman was walking that day near the intersection of Prince Charles Road and Saville Row when an unknown man pushed her to the ground and stole her purse.

The suspect fled and the victim is still in hospital recovering from a broken arm.

Police say the suspect is a "Caucasian male, 20-40 years of age, with black wavy or curly hair, wearing a black jacket."

The day before at around 3:15 p.m., police say a male cyclist snatched a purse from a 104-year-old woman who was walking on a path near the intersection of Cleary Avenue and Richmond Road. The woman was not injured.

The suspect in that case is described as a Caucasian male in his 40s.

Anyone with information with respect to either of these incidents is asked to contact the Robbery Unit at 613-236-1222 ext. 5116 or Crime Stoppers at 613-233-8477 (TIPS) or toll free at 1-800-222-8477.

Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird, left, gets an overview of the design of the new Holocaust Monument on Monday. JOE LOFARO/METRO

Holocaust memorial to inspire reflection

Winning design. Tribute expected to draw in Canadians of all faiths

JOE

joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird helped unveil the winning design Monday of Canada's National Holocaust Monument, which will open to the public next year in downtown Ottawa.

The new monument, designed by Lord Cultural Resources of Toronto, will be located at the corner of Wellington and Booth Streets, facing the Canadian War Museum, just west of Parliament Hill. The team won after a jury considered five other design concepts.

A bird's-eye view of a rendering of the monument shows several towering, pointed concrete walls forming a star-like shape.

At the centre is an open gathering space with a capacity of about 900 to 1,000 people.

Photographs of killing fields and other Holocaust sites in Europe will be embedded in the large concrete walls in that space.

"Our hope is that people will think about people that were killed. That ... there was no other event like the Holocaust," said Dov Goldstein, principal consultant with Lord Cultural Resources of Toronto, the firm that designed the monument.

The Holocaust's many faces

"There's also a message of humanity's enduring strength."

Dov Goldstein, consultant with Lord Cultural Resources of Toronto, the firm that designed the monument will think about people that were killed. That ... there was no other event like the Holocaust," said Dov Goldstein, principal consultant with Lord Cultural Resources of Toronto, the firm that designed the monument.

"There's also a message of humanity's enduring strength, about survival and about being able to come to Canada over the last 50, 60 years and embracing our democratic institution."

The federal government will match the $4 million that was raised by The National Holocaust Monument Development Council.

Baird, a vocal advocate of human rights, said the Holocaust is a reminder of how "basic human rights could be stripped away for the simple fact of ethnic origin, religion or sexuality."

"Canada's National Holocaust Monument will bring Canadians of all faiths together to remember the suffering of millions of innocent victims of the Holocaust."

Twelve OC Transpo drivers were honoured Monday at the 24th annual Transecure Awards ceremony for going above and beyond the call of duty.

Among them, OC Transpo bus operator Maryanne Ryan was named the 2013 Transecure Employee of the Year for helping a family in need one evening in September 2013, notifying authorities that she had noticed a house on fire. With no passengers on board, Ryan ran to the house to wake the family and get them out of harm's way. Ryan kept them safe by using her bus as a shelter for the family while they waited for the Ottawa Fire Services to arrive. METRO

Suspected copper thief arrested

Gatineau police arrested a resident of their city Monday they suspect in a string of copper thefts. Police say the 40-year-old man was arrested around 1 p.m. near 100 Atawé St. Police say they caught the man in the act of stealing copper wire from street lights and credited the catch to having set up a patrol near bike paths after noting a trend in the thefts.

Police say they also seized ecstasy and burglary tools. The suspect was travelling with a bike with a small trailer that police say was used to transport the equipment. He was slated to appear in Gatineau court Monday, where he was likely to face charges of theft, possession and breach of probation. METRO

Heart Institute to reduce radiation in cardiac imaging

U of O. New software reduces cancer risk for patients, improves images for doctors

 JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

The University of Ottawa Heart Institute (UOHI) is on the cusp of dramatically changing the way it tests patients for cardiovascular disease by reducing radiation exposure with new imaging technology.

The current CZT gamma camera, first used at the institute in 2009, was able to reduce radiation exposure to below five millisieverts (mSv) — well below the recommended level of nine mSv by the American Society for Nuclear Cardiology.

That 50-per-cent reduction is thanks to a new software upgrade which has made the cardiac images clearer and easier to read.

Now, UOHI is going a step further with the acquisition of a new camera, the CT scanner, that has 19 detectors attached to it as opposed to the traditional two on the CZT.

"You have that many more eyes looking at the heart. And when you have many more eyes looking at the heart, you don't need as much information because you have 19 different perspectives," said Dr. Benjamin Chow, director of cardiac imaging.

More detectors means patients will be exposed to less radiation during the imaging test. Rough estimates put the required dosage close to less than one mSv, Chow said.

The new device is expected to be installed at the institute later this summer to help diagnose patients with chest pain or shortness of breath who appear to suffer from narrowing of the arteries. Chow expects the first patients to be scanned with the new device by early September.

"The more radiation you are exposed to, the more likely you'll develop cancer. Everything that we can do to minimize radiation exposure, in theory, will translate to a lower risk of developing cancer," said Chow.

Bullied teen's dad calls on fathers to 'set a better example'

Ottawa Police Chief Charles Bordeleau speaks at a talk on violence against women. TREVOR GREENWAY/METRO

Dads have to start teaching their sons how to respect women.

So says the father of a bullied teenage girl who committed suicide after allegedly being sexually assaulted by classmates in Nova Scotia. He spoke at a violence-against-women talk Monday, the focus of which was men speaking out against violence against women.

His daughter, who can't be identified because of a publication ban, made headlines after she committed suicide, citing constant torment when photos of the alleged assault were distributed to her classmates. He addressed the many dads in the room and spoke of the power they wield in stopping the cycle of violence against women in Canada.

"I think if fathers were more engaged in their sons, and set a better example, perhaps in a generation, this whole thing would change," he said, telling the horrific story of how his daughter was bullied to the point of suicide.

The man took the packed room through his dark journey and how he constantly recounts the fateful night his daughter was allegedly sexually assaulted.

He said there's not a day that goes by that he doesn't wish a "hero" had shown up to save his daughter that night — someone's son who was raised by a "real man."

"Whose son would you like to come walking in that door?" he asked.

"I would give my life right now for a hero to walk in that door ... but nobody did."

The talk was part of Crime Prevention Ottawa's Together We Can campaign, which included speakers such as Ottawa Police Chief Charles Bordeleau and Ottawa Coun. Shad Qadri.

Ottawa culinary master wins prestigious Top Chef Canada

$100,000 prize.

Navarra owner now has sights set on new culinary competition

 TREVOR GREENWAY
trevor.greenway@metronews.ca

An Ottawa chef is $100,000 richer and has foodie bragging rights after outlasting 13 other culinary whizzes to become Canada's Top Chef in 2014.

You'll likely soon see a plaque go on the wall at Navarra restaurant, as chef and owner René Rodriguez won the popular cooking competition during Monday's finale of Top Chef Canada on the Food Network.

Although the finale only aired last night, Rodriguez has known he's the top dog for an entire year. He's glad he can finally blow the lid off it all.

"It's surreal. It hasn't sunk in yet," said Rodriguez, who will also get a brand new $30,000 custom kitchen as well as several other goodies chefs dream of. But it's the recognition that makes this Ottawa chef's own go "ding."

"The ultimate, ultimate, ultimate prize is being Canada's Top Chef," Rodriguez told Metro.

"Money will come and go, everything can come and go, but a title like this, no one can take that away from me."

The 10-week competition pitted chefs from across the country in challenges to create dish after dish each week.

Some pushed the chefs out of their comfort zone — forcing them to cook with molecular gastronomy techniques, such as using liquid nitrogen and blowtorches to cook their food. It was this episode and Rodriguez's Sea Scallop Ceviche that launched him into the finale.

"I always had faith that my dish would get me to the finale and it did, but it was very stressful," he said.

"Some of the elements I had to cook with were out of my comfort zone, but I was still able to bring a little bit of my Latin influence in some of my dishes."

But Rodriguez isn't stopping here. While he admits he will take "a few days off" after the big win, he is already whipping up a menu to eventually vie for and win the title of Iron Chef.

Lime shortage makes margarita lovers sour

That lime wedge on the corner of your margarita glass might look a little squeezed these days.

A shortage of the little green fruits in Mexico is causing many of Ottawa's southern-themed restaurants to cut back on the lime.

"It's crazy," said René Rodriguez, the chef and owner of Navarra. "It's out of control. It's out of control."

A mix of fungal disease and heavy rains in Mexico has killed lime crops and spiked prices. Some restaurant owners say they are now paying more than $80 for a case of about 60 limes, which is more than double the price a case cost about two months ago.

But most say they won't shift the costs onto customers — at least not yet.

Westboro's Mexican food truck Bonita Cantina is only serving one lime per plate — rather than one lime per taco. Owner Ryan Zurkowsky said he would resort to bottled lime-juice in an "absolute worst case scenario," but he's not worried about that happening any time soon.

TacoLot owner Jon Reilly-

André-Philippe Lavoie, supervisor at Blue Cactus Bar & Grill, squeezes a lime into a margarita. LUCY SCHOLEY/METRO

Roe said he has ditched the lime wedge garnishes altogether, but is keeping the flavour in salsa and guacamole.

"It's not that big of a deal," he said. "But there's nothing to replace it. Lemon doesn't quite cut it."

There's one drink that simply can't do without limes: margaritas.

"We have no choice but to actually cut your lime even a bit smaller," said Mohamed Yusuf, the executive chef at Blue Cactus Bar and Grill in the ByWard Market. LUCY SCHOLEY/METRO WITH FILES FROM TREVOR GREENWAY AND AFP

A less-lime alternative

Navarra's spicy pineapple margarita:

- One tablespoon pineapple puree; pinches of chili powder; one oz. lime juice (in case of a lime shortage: substitute half with lemon juice); dash simple syrup; 1.25 oz. tequila; 0.25 oz. of Triple Sec.
- Shake over ice; line rim with spicy salt; garnish with lime.

Like a pub crawl, but with more food

May 20 fest. Foodies to dig into Dishcrawl on Elgin Street

lucy.scholey@metronews.ca

Whether you're a seasoned foodie or a neighbourhood newbie seeking tasty eats, a North American restaurant trend is hitting Ottawa.

Dishcrawl is like a pub-crawl, but with food. You hit up one restaurant, taste a plate and move on to another. Ottawa's version on May 20 will feature three different restaurants on Elgin Street — one of which is Asian-fusion locale Izakaya and the other two kept under wraps.

A savoury waffle with pulled pork, a bison chili poutine on a potato waffle and an elegant soufflé will be on the menu.

"It's a little taste, but at the same time, it's a lot of food," said Dishcrawl Ottawa ambassador Jan Napeñas. "A lot of the time, the restaurants give way more because they want to really showcase what they're made of."

Dishcrawl was a startup company that began in San Jose and has since spread to 250 cities across the continent. "Food is becoming a way to socialize," said Napeñas. "There's kind of this break from eating at a chain restaurant and people want to experience really good food and want to experience it with other people."

Dishcrawl events have hit the Glebe, Hintonburg and Little Italy over the past few months. Napeñas said she's talking people to the "non-touristy" spots on Elgin Street this round.

"There's a lot of different underground restaurants that some people may not necessarily go to when they think of Elgin Street," she said.

A Dishcrawl ticket costs $60. The locations will be sent via email, but you can follow hints on the Twitter account @DishcrawlOTT.

More evacuated as flood waters rise in north Ont.

Provincial officials say more residents of a remote northern Ontario community were being flown out of the area Monday, as evacuations continued due to flood threats.

Community leaders in the Ontario First Nation of Kashechewan had asked the federal and provincial governments for help relocating those who hadn't already been evacuated on the weekend.

About 600 people were relocated to Thunder Bay and Greenstone on Saturday and Sunday despite poor weather Sunday that hampered evacuation efforts.

Andrew Morrison, a spokesman for Ontario's Ministry of Community Safety and Correctional Services, says other places are being lined up to host the remaining evacuees from the community of 2,000.

On Monday, plans were to transport 360 people to Cornwall and another 270 to Kapuskasing.

Both federal and provincial governments are involved in the efforts to move the remaining evacuees from the community on the shores of James Bay, after a state of emergency was declared due to rising waters on the Albany River.

The community has faced rising flood waters for several days and officials say the flooding has affected critical infrastructure, such as sewer systems.

Last week some residents were forced from their homes and moved to communities further south but were allowed to return as the situation eased.

The situation, however, was expected to get worse, prompting the expanded evacuation, Morrison said.

Kashechewan has a history of spring time flooding, but federal plans to move the community off the flood plain fell through several years ago.

There's a board game for everyone — even people who don't like games.

That's the idea behind the Loft Board Game Lounge, which is opening this week.

The shelves inside the liquor-licensed café are stocked with about 800 games from classic Monopoly to more modern Pandemic.

Owner Mike Hopkins, a self-proclaimed "board game enthusiast," who is starting the venture with business partner Alessandro Argentina, said he has a staff full of "game-explainers" who can help people with rules.

The space sits above the Lunenburg Pub & Bar on Waller Street. It was originally built as a horse stable in 1866. A section in the wall that was used to pull up hay has been filled in with a faux fireplace. With the leather sofas, there's enough seating to accommodate up to 70 people.

Special glass tables have a secondary shelf for food if the tops become too cluttered with games.

Hopkins said they are working on getting permits to start a microbrewery in the basement. For now, they have two Ontario-brewed beers on tap.

There will be a $5 "stay and play" fee, except at lunchtime. Hopkins said they are discouraging people from bringing games, but are taking requests for more games they can buy at secondhand stores.

Don't expect to bring your laptop for a round of Internet backgammon, either — there's no free Wi-Fi at the Loft.

"We're all about being unplugged and just interacting with the humans around you," Hopkins said. "I think it really makes us happier. I think it really gives us a reason to kind of sit around and talk and laugh and plead and threaten and beg... all in the name of playing."

The Loft Board Game Lounge will quietly open doors at 14 Waller St. this week, with a bigger grand opening next week.

June 12 election.

Hudak, Horwath vow to reduce hydro agencies

Ontario's opposition parties promised help for consumers Monday to deal with soaring electricity bills, which they blamed on the Liberals' energy policies, as the campaign for the June 12 election entered its second week.

The Liberals are particularly vulnerable on the energy file after cancelling two gas plants prior to the last election in 2011 at a cost to taxpayers of up to $1.1 billion, and with a planned 33 per cent hike in electricity bills over the next three years.

The Progressive Conservatives targeted generous subsidies under the Liberals' Green Energy Act in their pledge to keep electricity rate hikes lower than forecast.

"We need to end these expensive subsidies for the wind and solar projects that are driving our rates higher and higher still," said Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak. "It doesn't make any sense to add more expensive power we don't need."

Visiting a factory in Smithville, in his own riding in the Niagara Peninsula, Hudak also promised to reduce the number of government electricity agencies, and said he'd cut the "bloated" bureaucracy at Hydro One and Ontario Power Generation to help get electricity rates low enough to generate 40,000 new jobs.

Campaigning in Thunder Bay, New Democrat Leader Andrea Horwath said she too would merge some of the electricity agencies and would want to eliminate "waste in the bureaucracy," but that's where she parted company with the Tories.

"People are shocked when they open their electricity bills," said Horwath as she promised to lift the provincial portion of HST off hydro bills if she becomes premier. That

Fighting back

Premier Kathleen Wynne said electricity rates went up mainly because the government had to invest billions of dollars to repair and upgrade the electricity system after years of neglect, and defended the Liberals' Green Energy Act.

- "Are we going to back away from clean, renewable energy," Wynne said at a campaign stop in Vaughan, north of Toronto. "No, we're not going to do that."
- At a later stop at Mohawk College in Stoney Creek, Wynne warned Hudak's pledge to slash tens of thousands of public sector jobs would hurt Ontario's fragile economic recovery.

Psychiatrist: Anxiety disorder may have led to Oscar Pistorius's killing girlfriend

Oscar Pistorius has an anxiety disorder that may have contributed to the fatal shooting of his girlfriend, an expert testified at his murder trial Monday, prompting the chief prosecutor to say the double-amputee Olympian should be placed under psychiatric observation.

The judge has not yet ruled on prosecutor Gerrie Nel's application that the court considers a period of mental evaluation for the runner.

Dr. Merrill Vorster, a psychiatrist called by the defence, testified that a series of events in Pistorius' turbulent life, including the amputation of his lower legs as a baby, his parents' divorce, his late mother's habit of sleeping with a gun under her pillow and his own fear of violent crime contributed to his "increasing stress."

Vorster said Pistorius' anxiety and his physical disability may have caused him to act differently from other people when he shot four times through a toilet stall door, killing girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp. Pistorius, 27, claims he mistook Steenkamp for an intruder, but prosecutors say he killed her after an argument and shot in anger, not fear.

Pistorius' chief lawyer Barry Roux said at the start of defence-led testimony that the double amputee's vulnerability and disability was at the centre of his case. But prosecutor Nel questioned whether Pistorius was merely trying one of a number of defences for shooting his girlfriend.

Condoms not to be used in prostitution cases: NYPD

New policy. Police don't want to give condoms a bad rap while fighting crime

The New York Police Department will no longer confiscate unused condoms from suspected sex workers to be used as evidence of prostitution, ending a long-standing practice that had been criticized by civil rights groups for undermining efforts to combat AIDS and other sexually transmitted infections.

Under the new policy announced Monday, officers may continue to seize condoms as evidence in sex-trafficking and promotion of prostitution cases, but they will not use them in support of prostitution cases. Critics had said the previous policy amounted to police harassment.

"The NYPD heard from community health advocates and took a serious look at making changes to our current policy as it relates to our broader public safety mission," Police Commissioner William Bratton said.

For decades, police in New York and elsewhere had confiscated condoms from sex work suspects ostensibly for them to be used as evidence in criminal trials.

"A policy that inhibits people from safe sex is a mistake and dangerous," Mayor Bill de Blasio said Monday. "And there are a number of ways you can go about putting together evidence" without condoms, he said.

Civil rights groups and advocates for sex workers and gay, lesbian and transgender young people commended the department's new policy, but want a ban on the use of condoms as evidence in sex trafficking and promotion of prostitution cases too.

A 2010 study by the city's Department of Health surveyed more than 60 sex workers and found that more than half had condoms confiscated by police. Nearly a third said they had at times not carried condoms because they feared getting into trouble.

Two years later, the group Human Rights Watch interviewed 197 sex workers in New York, Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco and found that many limited the number of condoms they carried or went without because they feared police attention.

The report concluded that transgender teens, street-level sex workers and immigrants were especially targeted because of their appearance or behaviour.

Prosecutors in Brooklyn, San Francisco and elsewhere decided to stop using condoms as evidence in prostitution cases. Measures to abolish the practice across New York State have been introduced in for nearly two decades and last year passed the Assembly. Similar legislation has been introduced in California. # 'It's not just a building anymore. It's a spirit'

Lac-Mégantic. Quebec town plans to rebuild the Musi-Café, destroyed in 2013's train disaster, as partly a gathering place, partly a memorial

Time has passed in Lac-Mégantic, but the anxiety has not.

Ten months after the train disaster that killed 47 in the Quebec town, residents should be gearing up for a bustling tourist season.

Instead, they are still finding their feet after the tragedy and hoping that a construction project begun last week will return some spirit to a town that has known only ghosts since July 6, 2013, when a runaway train loaded with crude oil jumped the tracks and wiped out a swath of the downtown.

The project that is being unveiled Tuesday — the reconstruction of the Musi-Café, a popular local bar — is both emotional and practical.

Practical because the destruction of the rallying point for local revellers, karaoke singers and visiting musical acts has left Lac-Mégantic without a nightlife or place to celebrate moments of joy.

It is charged with emotion because the bar was where about 30 of the 47 victims were enjoying drinks, music and friends when the train flipped, caught fire and exploded.

Just a few things were recovered: a beer sign, a few beer kegs, a drink shaker and a patio umbrella. But the most touching item bar owner Yannick Gagné now has in his possession is the charred steel box that held cash, coins, keys and deposit slips signed by staff, three of whom died that night.

It was thought to have been incinerated, but was discovered two months ago in debris around the town's former library, down the street from the Musi-Café's former site.

"They put it aside and when they opened it three weeks or one month later, they realized there was too much money for it to belong to the library and there were special objects inside like keys, because I always kept the keys inside," Gagné told Torstar News Service on Monday.

These items will make up part of a memorial that will adorn the new bar when it opens in August or September. It will honour all the townsfolk who died that morning, but especially the many whose last moments were inside the bar.

The new Musi-Café will be just 6,000 square feet of commercial space located at the end of Lac-Mégantic's relocated downtown strip, but it is nevertheless an "overwhelming project," said Marc Bovet, head of

Charges filed

The Crown prosecutor's office in Quebec says three people and a train company will face criminal negligence charges stemming from the disaster.

- 47 counts of criminal negligence have been filed against Thomas Harding, Jean Demaitre and Richard Labrie as well as the Montreal, Maine and Atlantic Railway Ltd.

Bone Structure, the Quebec firm handling the construction.

"It's not just a building anymore," he said. "It's a spirit."

"Yannick has been designated, whether he wanted it or not ... as being the leader of rebuilding this community, and it doesn't all come with bricks and mortar."

Human rights crisis. UN official slams Canada's record on First Nations

A UN rapporteur is at a loss to explain how a prosperous and sophisticated country like Canada has come to have on its hands a First Nations human-rights problem that has reached "crisis proportions."

James Anaya's report picks a fight with the federal government on several fronts — education, energy projects on reserves and missing or murdered aboriginal women, to name a few — and is sure to amplify tensions between Canada's First Nations and a federal government they so thoroughly distrust.

"It is difficult to reconcile Canada's well-developed legal framework and general prosperity with the human-rights problems faced by indigenous peoples in Canada that have reached crisis proportions in many respects," writes Anaya, the UN's special rapporteur on indigenous rights.

Aboriginal Affairs Minister Bernard Valcourt acknowledged more needs to be done, but highlighted steps the government has taken to give First Nations access to housing, education and matrimonial rights.

"Our government is proud of the effective and incremental steps taken in partnership with aboriginal communities. We are committed to continuing to work with our partners to make significant progress in improving the lives of aboriginal people in Canada," Valcourt said in a statement.

Pregnant drivers. Risk of car crashes jumps during 2nd trimester, study finds

Pregnant women who drive appear to be at a significantly higher risk of being in a serious car crash during the second trimester of their pregnancies, a new study suggests.

The researchers, who believe fatigue and sleep disruption are probably responsible, say the increase in risk is similar to what is seen for people who suffer from sleep apnea.

The authors of the study, published in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, said they aren't trying to suggest pregnant women stop driving. In fact, they noted that men of a similar age have even higher rates of accidents than pregnant women do, so the answer is not turning over the keys to one's husband, or male partner.

But pregnant women should be aware of the elevated risk, and ensure that they drive with more caution, Redelmeier said: Stop at every stop sign, use indicator lights to signal turns, wear seat belts at all times.

Flood of 2011. Last of evacuees left Manitoba hotel in November but bills still outstanding

A Manitoba hotel owner says he has been forced to lay off more than 50 employees, close his hotel and put it up for sale because Ottawa owes him $3 million in unpaid bills.

Mike Bruneau, who owns Misty Lake Lodge in Gimli, says he's owed the money for feeding and housing dozens of aboriginal people who were displaced by the 2011 flood. Bruneau was paid a portion of the cash but says he is owed more. Bruneau says he also needs to be reimbursed for damage to the hotel and interest on the debt.

"They were in my hotel for 2 1/2 years," he said Monday. "(The rooms) aren't rentable. I wanted them to pay my bills, so I could fix the hotel up. They didn't pay my bills, so I couldn't go back to doing weddings and conferences, the kind of stuff I used to do."

Bruneau said he got an $8-million offer to sell four years ago. He isn't expecting to get that much now.

The Manitoba Association of Native Firefighters had been given millions to care for evacuees, but Bruneau said the group stopped paying him when he accused it publicly of squandering money.

Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada is auditing the association's handling of the prolonged evacuation and the Red Cross is now responsible for the long-term care of about 2,000 evacuees.

Wurst-case scenario for many conservative Eurovision fans

Drag queen. European opinion divided after Austrian victory at music competition

It's the beard that divided a continent. The victory of whiskered drag queen Conchita Wurst in the Eurovision Song Contest had celebrities from Nigella Lawson to Russell Brand posting bearded selfies on the Internet in tribute — and Russian men snapping clean-shaven pictures in protest.

For millions of viewers, the annual Eurovision show is a cheesy music competition renowned for its camp, kitsch and electro beats. But the nation-based contest is also a potent mix of patriotism and politics in bubblegum wrapping.

Wurst's win has exposed a divide between Europe's progressives and conservatives that British tabloid The Sun cheekily described Monday as the "Furred World War."

The statuesque brunette with the soaring voice of a diva and a full dark beard called her first-place finish in Saturday's contest a victory for tolerance and respect. Austrian President Heinz Fischer said it was "not just a victory for Austria, but above all for diversity and tolerance in Europe."

But Russian Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogozin tweeted that Eurovision had shown

the true face of European integration: "a bearded girl." On social media, a variety of Russian men posted shaving-foam selfies alongside slogans such as "Get shaved, don't be like a woman!"

Pro-Kremlin legislator Olga Batalina — deputy head of the family and maternity issues committee of the lower house of Russia's parliament — said Wurst's victory showed "it's not enough to have a talent and a good voice to win Eurovision; you also need to reject your nature, identity and traditions." She chalked the win up to "aggressive and persistent" gay propaganda.

That may sound like a lot of rhetoric over a talent show but Eurovision has always been more than a simple singing contest. Founded in 1956, the competition pits European nations against one another in pursuit of pop music glory.

But it is more generally loved, and mocked, for its

Not just a song contest

Politics, both personal and international, has often intruded on Eurovision.

- Transsexual Israeli singer Dana International sparked protests by ultra-Orthodox Jews in her homeland in 1998 but went on to win.

parade of cheesy tunes from quirky performers. The live telecast is watched by some 180 million people and has a particularly strong gay following. It also faces perennial accusations of regional block-voting and geopolitical games.

East Ukraine: Autonomy declared by pro-Russians

Pro-Moscow insurgents in eastern Ukraine declared independence Monday and sought to join Russia, undermining Ukraine's May 25 presidential election, strengthening the Kremlin's hand and putting pressure on Kyiv to hold talks with the separatists.

Russia signalled it has no intention of subsuming eastern Ukraine the way it annexed Crimea in March. Instead, Moscow is pushing to include eastern regions in negotiations on Ukraine's future — suggesting that Russia prefers a political, not military, solution to its worst standoff with the West since the Cold War.

Such talks are central to a potential path toward peace outlined Monday by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. The plan laid out by Swiss President Didier Burkhalter calls on all sides to refrain from violence and urges immediate amnesty, talks on decentralization and the status of the Russian language.

That's a key complaint of the armed insurgents who have seized power in eastern regions and clashed with government troops and police. But it's up to the Ukrainian government to take the next step.

People celebrating the declaration of independence for Donetsk region on Monday in Ukraine. ALEXANDER ZEMLIANICHENKO/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Acting Prime Minister Arseniy Yatsenyuk pledged Monday to hold talks with those in Ukraine's east. But he gave no specifics and did not address Sunday's vote or the declarations of independence by the Donetsk and Luhansk regions.

With a national presidential election scheduled in 13 days, the regions of Donetsk and Luhansk declared independence Monday, and those in Donetsk even asked to join neighbouring Russia. The sprawling areas along Russia's border, home to about 6.6 million people, form Ukraine's industrial heartland.

The interim government in Kyiv had been hoping the presidential vote would unify the country behind a new, democratically chosen leadership. Ukraine's crisis could grow worse if regions start rejecting the presidential vote. Dozens have been reported killed since Ukrainian forces began trying to retake some eastern cities.

Girls won't be freed until fighters are released: Boko Haram leader

Nigeria. Leader makes prisoner-swap demand in video that may show first evidence of kidnapped schoolgirls

A Nigerian Islamic extremist leader says nearly 300 abducted schoolgirls will not be seen again until the government frees his detained fighters.

A new video from Nigeria's Boko Haram terrorist network received Monday purports to show some of the girls and young women chanting Quranic verses in Arabic. The barefoot girls look frightened and sad and sit huddled together wearing grey Muslim veils. Some Christians among them say they have converted to Islam.

It is the first video evidence of the girls and young women since more than 300 were kidnapped from a northeastern school on April 15.

"I swear to almighty Allah you will not see them again until you release our people that you have captured," leader Abubakar Shekau says as he cradles an assault rifle in the video.

It is not known how many suspected Boko Haram members are detained by security forces. Hundreds were killed by soldiers last month when Shekau's fighters stormed the military's main northeastern barracks in Maiduguri city, the birthplace of Boko Haram.

In the video, two of the girls are brought to the front and questioned by an unseen man.

"Why have you become a Muslim?" the man asks one.

"The reason why I became a Muslim is because the path we are on is not the right path," the girl says, nervously turning her body from side to side, her eyes darting off to the side. "We should enter the right path so that Allah will be happy with us."

Families have said that most of the girls abducted are Christians.

Fifty-three schoolgirls have escaped by themselves and 276 are missing, police say.

Ads. Frozen food makers hope to warm consumers up to products with campaign

Frozen food makers planned to launch their first national TV ad in the U.S. in defence of their products on Tuesday as in a fight to boost slipping sales.

The ad will include the tag line "Frozen: How Fresh Stays Fresh," and is intended to address negative misconceptions people have about frozen foods.

The push comes as frozen food sales have been hurt by consumers moving to food they feel is fresh or natural.

The push is being funded by companies including General Mills, H.J. Heinz, Jasper Wyman & Son, Kellogg, Lakeside Foods, the Schwan Food Co. and Seneca Foods.

Although frozen vegetables are often touted as being just as wholesome as their fresh counterparts, frozen meals and snacks are widely seen as being full of sodium and preservatives, or lacking in the taste department.

meals are down three per cent at $8.92 billion, according to Euromonitor International. And this year, the market researcher is forecasting a decline of an additional two per cent.

In the 30-second commercial set to run on cable and network TV on Tuesday, a voiceover states that "freezing is nature's pause button." It also asks viewers to take a "fresh look at frozen," as images of appealing foods that were apparently once frozen are shown. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Prosthetic hands get a modern update

DEKA Arm System.
The latest twist on the 1912 invention lets amputees open envelopes, pick up eggs

Modern life is quickly becoming stranger, and for amputees, better than science fiction.

Take the revolutionary new prosthetic limb that looks, and is, completely cutting edge.

The limb is called the DEKA Arm System — and it was developed in New Hampshire by serial inventor/genius Dean Kamen and his team. The thing even has fingernails.

Technology for prosthetic hands hasn't had too many radical advances. Until now, most have been variations on the theme of the 1912 invention of the clasp hook prosthetic.

The DEKA represents a mind-boggling advancement.

Wireless sensors placed under the foot of the user allow them to control six different grips. And that means, as you'll see in the demonstration (scan the Metro AR photo to see), that a user with one hand can now perform previously difficult tasks like opening an envelope.

The impetus for the invention was a DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency) initiative called The Revolutionizing Prosthetics Program. Its goal is "so service members with arm loss may one day have the option of choosing to return to duty. Additionally, the dexterous hand capabilities developed under the program have already been applied to small robotic systems used in manipulating unexploded ordnance, thus keeping soldiers out of situations that have led to limb loss."

The new system has just been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration,

In this video screenshot, Fred Downs shows how he can use different grips on the DEKA Arm System to open and handle mail. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the system for commercialization last week. SCREENGRAB

tion, meaning that it can be manufactured, sold. It's powerful enough to hold a hand drill, while sensitive enough to allow a user to pick up items as delicate as eggs. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

ME TARZAN, YOU BREADWINNER

Earlier this month, Fox News hosted a discussion about whether it's problematic for a woman to make more money than her husband. Apparently, segment host Clayton Morris believes female breadwinners are causing serious marital issues among heterosexual couples.

"Isn't there some sort of biological, innate need for men to be the caveman?" he asked a panel of guests.

A genuinely concerned Morris then went on to argue that men should be responsible for "going out and bringing home the dinner" and it is emasculating for a husband to be out-earned by his wife.

I understand that no one has ever accused the talking heads at Fox of being overtly feminist, but this news segment seemed particularly chauvinistic, even for them.

It's hard to believe that people are still clinging to these outdated gender roles. Hosting a televised debate about

SHE SAYS
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

how "Alpha women" are undermining their husbands and contributing to some sort of imagined societal breakdown seems like something that might have happened in 1954, not 2014.

Are we really supposed to believe that modern men are so fragile and insecure? A 2013 Pew Research Study found that almost a quarter of married mothers in the U.S. earn more than their husbands, which means there must be a lot of bruised male egos out there, according to Morris's caveman logic.

In my opinion, women who are the primary income earners in a relationship are about as "problematic" as husbands who change diapers or do the laundry.

Children are incredibly draining on all of your resources — time, energy and definitely money — and nobody should be criticized for contributing to the family finances.

A man's self-esteem might be closely linked to his career, but so is mine.

The women I know are far more likely to find self-fulfillment by succeeding in a lucrative career than perfecting their ability to bake a cake or be a "good wife" in the traditional, Fox News kind of way.

Raising a family is a joint effort. Married partners are playing on the same team, and men and women shouldn't be competing over their paycheques.

There are so many different types of households, and expecting the partner with the most testosterone to fulfil the role of "provider" at all times is a completely archaic notion.

Female breadwinners aren't an issue; sexist news anchors who broadcast their patriarchal opinions and disapprove of women with high-paying jobs are the real problem in this scenario.

Men should be proud to be coupled up with a successful partner, not worrying about how their wife's salary impacts their own masculine identity.

WE ACT: CANADA DOES GOOD

Stories from hospital hallways

Each month, we profile a Canadian who's up to a whole lot of good. Here's one we'd like you to meet:

Who: Jackie Kinder, community volunteer with Childcan, London.

What: Fundraising and organizing community events to help support the families of young people diagnosed with cancer.

Why: To provide the families with the financial and community support they need to focus on their children.

Jackie met 14-year-old Stephanie Simmons, a three-time brain-tumour survivor, when she began volunteering with Childcan. "She's my hero," says Jackie. "Knowing what she went through and knowing that through it all she was so brave, so concerned with helping other children, that's what hooked me." Since then, Jackie has taken a leading role fundraising for Childcan, participating in the Inside Ride cycling event and the National Day of Action for kids with cancer at the CN Tower.

What motivated you to get involved with families dealing with childhood cancer?

"You don't leave a child alone in the hospital — you're there for the long haul, and it's incredibly demanding on the family. When families come into the hospital, Childcan has people there right away to offer support. We bring them into the Childcan family, and I fundraise to help with gas, cafeteria vouchers, parking and credit-card bills. The financial hardships are major — but help is always there."

You've spent your life working with young people, first as a teacher and now as a volunteer. What advice do ### you have for them?

"Take the time to find and develop your passion for a cause. I've met some wonderful volunteers, and they are all happier for the work they do. They've learned that happiness doesn't mean all that you own — it's about giving back to other people. It's something I learned from Stephanie: it's the feeling you get doing something worthwhile for other people in your community that keeps us going."

St. Vincent wants all of your mind this summer

Indie musical landscape.

Singer Annie Clark comes into her own, creating a live show unlike any other St. Vincent concert

PAT HEALY

Metro World News in Boston

Just because St. Vincent's summer itinerary is packed with more than a dozen festival dates on four continents doesn't mean that Annie Clark is scaling back the theatrics of the St. Vincent concert experience.

The singer and guitarist will still force herself down a giant set of pink stairs, writhe around against a storm of strobe lights and eventually command the procession, purposefully poised like a cross, from an oversized pink throne.

"We've worked really hard on this strange fever dream of a show, bringing it to life," says Clark, "so it's important that people get the whole experience, even if it's at a festival."

That "strange fever dream of a show," along with the self-titled fifth St. Vincent album, may be the most definitive statement from any artist this year. From Clark's fat guitar leads to her strange and simple lyrics — any of which can be pulled out to illustrate what St. Vincent is all about in 2014 — it feels like the artist has truly discovered her identity.

St. Vincent performs at the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony for Nirvana. LARRY BUSACCA/GETTY IMAGES

"I'll always be evolving and be restless and wanting to move violently into the future," says Clark of arriving at something that could be considered iconic, "but I was reading Miles Davis's autobiography and it was saying how the hardest thing about being a musician is to sound like yourself. I can hear one note of Miles or Coltrane and know that it's them and it's the world that they have painstakingly created to be unmistakable. I just thought that this record for me was something where I had successfully created a landscape that was my own."

This landscape includes Clark's stylized lavender/gray old lady hair, of which she says: "Everyone is really obsessed with being young and youth culture and this sort of erroneous idea that things are the best when you are young, and I am young, but I wanted to see what it would look like to go in the opposite direction." And this landscape also includes conscious choreography in the live show, the likes of which hasn't been seen on a St. Vincent tour before. Clark says she was inspired by doing an album and tour with David Byrne, whose live show included an eight-piece brass band moving around the stage and creating what Clark says was "this whole other level of drama and whimsy and symbolic subconscious meaning that the audience can pick up on."

"I wanted to create a real experience for people, especially in this day and age where we are kind of obsessed with capturing moments at the expense of living them," she says. "I wanted to encourage people as much as possible to be present and be so engrossed in the show that they are not tempted to check their text messages."

SNL musical guest

St. Vincent will be the musical guest on the season finale of Saturday Night Live this weekend.

Her

Director: Spike Jonze

Stars: Joaquin Phoenix, Scarlett Johansson

Most sci-fi films make a human/machine love connection seem perverse or at least far out, yet Spike Jonze's Her treats it as a mild novelty.

Set about five years in the future in techno-fabulous L.A., it's nominally a simple sci-fi romance of a man, played by Joaquin Phoenix, falling in love with a machine, voiced by Scarlett Johansson.

There's much more going on than this, of course, as you'd expect from the director who brought us the layered head-spinners Being John Malkovich, Adaptation and Where the Wild Things Are. The film's subliminal message is that the human touch is in danger of being replaced with an "on" switch.

Phoenix and Johansson make for a completely convincing couple. Jonze sidesteps sniggers, shivers and convention, putting in plot twists that are at once shocking and completely logical.

He's really interested in the difficulty of making and maintaining emotional and intellectual ties, no matter whether the heart is made of flesh or silicon.

Extras include several making-of featurettes.

Mad Men's ad guru steps into the director's chair

Devil's Pocket.

John Slattery's dark comedy features Philip Seymour Hoffman in one of his last roles

MATT PRIGGE

Metro World News in New York City

John Slattery has spent much of his career playing authority figures, so it makes sense that he would one day become one. Since 2010, the actor has directed five episodes of Mad Men, all while continuing the role of quip-heavy, silver fox Roger Sterling. Now he's made his feature debut, the very different God's Pocket. It's an adaptation of Pete Dexter's gritty South Philadelphia comic drama about a truck thief (Philip Seymour Hoffman, in one of his last roles) trying to get the money to bury his murdered stepson.

When did you know you wanted to direct?

I don't know when it fully formed as an idea, but I would stand on film sets and have my own opinions, and generally keep them to myself. And then I read this book and it seemed like a movie to me. It took another 10 years to get it fully realized. The idea had time to gestate.

And the visual style is very different from Mad Men.

If you look at Peter Yates, here's a guy who directed The Dresser and The Friends of Eddie Coyle. If you looked at those two movies, I wonder if you'd be able to determine who directed them. The style is determined by the narrative, by the world the story lives in. At least to me. So Mad Men exists in a different world than does God's Pocket, so by necessity, it looks different.

It also neither romanticizes nor judges the denizens of the neighbourhood.

No one in the place feels sorry for themselves. It isn't the prettiest place on earth, but it isn't the worst. And it isn't without hope. No one walks around hanging their head, thinking how difficult life is. They just get on with it, with a sense of humour.

This wasn't shot in Philadelphia. Did you spend some time there?

I visited those neighbourhoods, including the one that was called Devil's Pocket. But it wasn't necessarily the same visually as it once was. We tried to shoot in Philadelphia, but we couldn't afford it, tax credit-wise, accommodations-wise. So we shot it in Yonkers, New York. It's a great-looking city, though.

Philip Seymour Hoffman was offered the journal- ### ist, ultimately played by Richard Jenkins, first. Why the switch?

He asked to play Mickey. I offered him the part of Richard Shellburn, and he said, "I like the script, but I want to play Mickey."

Was there a reason?

He didn't really say why. He said later that he was drawn to the simple humanity of the character. I think they all have humanity, at different levels or different kinds. Maybe it was something he hadn't played before. I don't know. He obviously had an emotional connection to the character, which is everything.

He was a producer on this film. What was he like?

He came with ideas, he was inclusive and he put people at ease. He could be intimidating — he's Philip Seymour Hoffman. People would walk in a little nervous at working with him, and he would put them at ease. He was a very smart guy. He knew everything that was happening, knew which takes were better. He was very involved.

John Slattery says God's Pocket was a 10-year project in the making. GETTY IMAGES

Angel Olsen gets personal

Lonely love songs. The emotionally charged singer relies only on herself as a songwriter, and the result is beautifully intimate

Metro World News in Boston

When Angel Olsen was working on her second studio album, Burn Your Fire For No Witness, which came out in February, she says she frequently found herself adhering to the whole For No Witness idea.

"It was all written in the same period, so whenever inspiration came to me, I would stop what I was doing because I could, because I was working for myself," she says. "So it was like, 'I can go home now — instead of this party — and write all of these things!'"

Wait, so she would literally leave parties?

"I remember weird examples," she confirms. "I wrote Iota when it was the middle of summer and I was having kind of a weird day, and my friends had this family picnic at the park and I left. At the time, we lived in Chicago and we had access to this place that had a rooftop. I went up there and had a beer and a guitar. It was just me by myself and I recorded [it] on my phone."

The resulting album includes the sort of confessional musings that might occur in conversation between close friends a few beers deep. Her vocals and lyrics are equally intimate.

"Just listening back to stuff of mine, it's like, 'OK, I guess I'm pretty obsessed with the idea of death and being alone and losing people,' but it's also about finding people," she says. "I feel like it's something that we all think about all the time, but it's not something we all talk about. I don't know if people get anything from it, but I'm not trying to create a kind of cathartic experience for anyone; it just happens to be the things I write about."

Olsen says the way she writes music has changed, because the way she listens to music has changed.

"I would listen to these songs and be like, 'Why are these people always talking about love?' They're just so disappointed and so lonely, it's ridiculous," she says. "And then I would listen to it again, and the more you live, the more that these simple thoughts cut deeper. You have more experiences with people and more experiences in general, with your friendships changing; I think that I've developed a different perspective on writing songs on stuff like that and embracing it. I think that's why I tend to obsess over it."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Community doesn't make the cut for a sixth season

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

The drama behind the scenes on beleaguered NBC sitcom Community was always nearly as compelling as the jokes onscreen. Perennially low-rated, Community faced cancellation every year for its five seasons. Now the scrappy little show that could finally can't: NBC gave it the axe last week.

The show's obsessive fans won't give up at such a minor setback, however. Fans have already begun petitioning production company Sony to shop Community to other networks.

But the plan won't work unless the most important fan of all, creator/showrunner Dan Harmon, is onboard, and he sounds decidedly unenthused.

"[W]hen Sony called me on Friday with the news, there was brief discussion at the end of the call about the concept of the show living elsewhere, and I was definitely in the 'eh' column," he writes on his blog.

"For a million reasons, some selfish, some creative, one logistic, five sexual, three racist (in a good way) and, oddly, nine isometric."

Hoop screams: Bieber gets booed at basketball game

Justin Bieber isn't faring well in the court of public opinion, if his attendance at a Los Angeles Clippers game Sunday is any indication. The troubled Canadian pop star showed up court-side with his mother, Pattie Mallette, to celebrate Mother's Day watching game four of the NBA playoffs, and the other fans in attendance apparently didn't think that was a great idea, according to E! News. "The entire place booed him when Staples Center cameras put him on the Jumbotron," a source says.

Ben's gambling garners negative attention from Jennifer

Ben Affleck is developing quite a reputation in Las Vegas, with several casinos accusing the Argo star of card counting — and his wife, Jennifer Garner, is less than thrilled, according to Star magazine. "Jen demanded to go to Vegas with Ben because she doesn't trust him, and he felt like he had no choice but to take her," a source says of the couple's visit last month that didn't end well for Affleck. "But after their dinners there each night, she would go back to their suite while Ben would stay out all night playing cards, betting thousands of dollars at a time. It makes Jen so mad, but once Ben starts gambling he can't stop." Until the casino intervenes, at least. And the source claims that when Affleck was busted by the Hard Rock Hotel & Casino, Garner was by his side: "She looked totally bored and annoyed," the source says.

Solange Knowles GETTY IMAGES

She may be young, but she's ready to throw down

In an exclusive video from TMZ.com, you can see Beyoncé's sister, Solange Knowles, viciously attacking Jay-Z in an elevator after the Met Ball. A man who appears to be Jay Z's bodyguard holds the swinging and kicking Knowles back, but she makes contact with the Hova at least three times. For her part, Beyoncé just kind of stands there.

The video was taken by a surveillance camera in the elevator of the Standard Hotel after the big gala on May 4th during an after party. As TMZ.com points out, the bodyguard stops the elevator at one point, probably in hopes of keeping this private affair private.

Too late.

Looks can be deceiving – even when it comes to boredom

Why do we get bored?

One professor weighs in

MONKS

Metro World News in New York City

You might think it's your fault you're dozing off in a classroom or office, but that's not always the case.

There are clear categories of boredom triggered by one's environment, says pioneering researcher Dr. Thomas Goetz from the University of Konstanz in Germany (see sidebar).

What is the most common misconception about boredom?

It's important to recognize the different types, and clearly define the differences.

You say apathetic boredom is the worst — how bad can it get?

The problem is that it makes every experience negative and the potential for arousal is low. You can't do anything against this state and it can become a big problem related to depression.

What puts us at risk?

Some people tend to a specific state but only to a small degree; each experience is based on situations. It's important that people recognize the forms. Often the problem is a lack of freedom, such as at school. Teachers should be aware and try to find individualized methods that give students choice.

Is there a risk that teaching

Researchers believe there are five types of boredom. ISTOCK ### boredom could cause more boredom?

There is an argument from anxiety research that awareness increases the problem, but in this case it is about knowing and realizing, and this goes hand in hand with resolving it.

What follow-up research is needed?

We didn't measure the effects. We need diagnostic instruments to show the experiences of boredom.

Types of boredom

Here are the various categories.

- Indifferent boredom. A relaxing, possibly positive type – “a general indifference to, and withdrawal from, the external world.”

- Calibrating boredom. Wandering thoughts – “general openness to behaviours aimed at changing the situation.”
- Searching boredom. “Actively seeking out specific ways of minimizing feelings of boredom.”

- Reactant boredom. Causes sufferers “to leave the boredom-inducing situation and avoid those responsible for this sitution (e.g., teachers).”

- Apathetic boredom. Impossible to break from this mode – “dangerous, similar to depression.”

Talking about ovarian cancer

BEST HEALTH MINUTE
Bonnie Munday
Editor-in-chief
Best Health Magazine

Raising awareness about ovarian cancer is crucial: 2,600 women are diagnosed with ovarian cancer in Canada each year. More than half will die. Plus, no effective screening test exists (many women believe the Pap test can detect this disease, but it can't), and the symptoms are hard to detect.

Melissa Greer writes about the issue in the current issue of Best Health magazine — Canada's healthy lifestyle magazine for women.

Women with the BRCA 1 or BRCA 2 gene mutation, who have a high risk of ovarian cancer, can reduce their risk of death before age 70 by 77 per cent if they have their ovaries removed. The research, published online in February in the Journal of Clinical Oncology, suggests that women with BRCA 1 who have this procedure by age 35 show the greatest benefit — reducing their risk of ovarian, Fallopian tube or peritoneal cancer by 80 per cent.

Ovarian Cancer Canada is holding fundraising events across Canada this year called Love Her (the next one is in Vancouver on May 28). At the Toronto event a couple of months ago, the lead author of the study cited above — the world-renowned Dr. Steven Narod of Women's College Research Institute in Toronto — shared the exciting news.

As national magazine partner to Love Her, Best Health was at the event to hear a moving speech by Bailey Urquhart, a 25-year-old from Hamilton, Ont., who was diagnosed with stage III ovarian cancer about a year ago. She had a complete hysterectomy (including removal of her ovaries) and underwent chemotherapy.

"You know your body best, and it's important to be your own advocate," Urquhart told the audience. She also reinforced the importance of being aware of the symptoms (including pelvic or abdominal pain that lasts longer than three weeks). In her case, her symptoms were overlooked by

Lamb gets a different type of R & R courtesy of raspberry and rosemary

Health Solutions

Mary had a little lamb

NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert
DHN, RNCP
myfriendinfood.com

Mary had a little lamb, because the meat is moist and rich and satisfying, and a little lamb is all you need. Bahaha. OK, that's enough.

Delicious lamb is raised in Canada and is generally a local, grass-fed food.

That said, if you don't check the label, you are more than likely enjoying an imported product from New Zealand.

Lamb leg or rump can be a little higher in fat and calories but it has all of the benefits of other animal meats like protein, B12 and zinc.

Lamb chops are generally a quick-cooking, leaner option and a nice change.

There is a slightly gamey flavour to lamb that can be an acquired taste but chops are generally milder. For newbies, sweet flavours like mint or raspberry are great compliments to minimize the grassiness.

The trick for cooking lamb chops is to be sure to preheat the grill to a very high heat but to only cook each chop for three or four minutes per side.

The protein is delicate and the meat is thin, so chops don't need much attention to be tender and delicious.

Let the chops rest for a few minutes before serving so that all of the juices remain within the meat.

FLASH FOOD

From your fridge to your table in 30 minutes or less

For an interesting presentation, place salad greens in mason jars and drizzle dressing. Or, simply serve as salad topped with chops.

1. In large shallow dish, whisk together vinegar, mustard, soy sauce, rosemary, oil and garlic. Spoon half into a separate bowl and thin with water to make dressing.

2. Add lamb chop in single layer, turning to coat well. Cover

Ingredients

- 3 tbsp raspberry vinegar
- 1 tbsp Dijon mustard
- 1 tbsp soy sauce
- 2 tsp fresh rosemary (minced) or 1/2 tsp dried
- 2 tbsp olive oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/2 cups mixed greens
- 8 lamb chops

and marinate on counter for 10-20 minutes or up to 24 hours covered in fridge, turning occasionally.

3. Discarding marinade, place chops on greased grill over medium-high heat; cook for about 5 minutes per side for medium rare or to desired doneness. Let rest or place into jars as below immediately to keep moist and warm.

4. For an interesting presentation, place salad greens in

Get 'em while they're grilled

1. In skillet over medium-high, heat oil until lightly smoking.

Ingredients

- 3 tbsp sesame oil
- 2 tsp minced garlic
- 1 tsp minced fresh ginger
- 2 tbsp chopped canned black beans
- 2 tsp dark miso
- 2 tbsp minced red onion
- 1 tbsp each minced Peppadew and jalapeno peppers
- 1 tbsp sliced scallions
- 1 tbsp chopped fresh cilantro
- 3 tbsp oyster sauce
- 2 tbsp soy sauce
- 2 tsp sugar
- 1/4 cup sake
- 1/4 cup water, plus 1 tbsp, divided
- 2 tbsp orange juice
- 1 tbsp cornstarch
- 3 dozen oysters

Add garlic and sauté 1 minute. Add ginger, then sauté another minute. Add black beans, miso, red onion, Peppadew, jalapenos, scallions and cilantro.

Sauté 1 minute, then stir in the oyster sauce, soy sauce, sugar, sake, 1/4 cup of water and orange juice. Bring to a boil, then simmer for 2 minutes.

2. In glass, stir cornstarch and remaining 1 tablespoon of water. Stir into the sauce and cook, stirring, for another minute. The sauce will be very thick and chunky. Set aside.

3. Heat the grill to high.

4. Shuck the oysters, pouring off any extra juice and leaving the oyster in the bottom half of the shell. Top each oyster with 1 teaspoon of the sauce. Set the oysters directly on the grill grates and cook for about 30 seconds, or until just barely heated. Use tongs to carefully transfer the oysters (the shells will be hot) to a platter. Serve immediately. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PROS, CONS OF SUMMER CLASSES

After this year's especially long and cold winter, spending more time in libraries and study halls is hardly top of mind for the average Canadian university or college student.

Yet, this spring, thousands of studious post-secondary scholars are hitting the books for summer classes.

While there are definite arguments in favour, summertime studies are not for everyone. Weighing the benefits — along with the detriments — can help make the choice a well-educated one for those on-the-fence fair-weather students.

Students opt for summer school for a host of motives — retaking a failed class, getting ahead in a degree program, completing a prerequisite, or simply lightening the course load for the regular school year.

Because summer courses tend to be smaller there are often fewer students, meaning more one-on-one attention from a teacher.

Though it depends on the school, summer courses are usually concentrated into several weeks of intensive instruction, which has its own pros and cons.

"It's like working a full-time job," says Katherine Connolly, who worked for two years in the registrar's office at the University of King's College in Halifax, N.S. "You have to be able to focus and be disciplined."

The condensed format also mean deadlines

SHUTTERSTOCK

— whether for assignments or drop dates — pass quickly.

"Two weeks in if you realize that you're not going to do well, and that maybe this course isn't for you, you're sort of stuck."

But the limited time frame also means students are free to invest more time and energy into a single subject without the distraction of other classes.

"I liked just doing the one condensed course because you're learning everything about that one specific topic rather than spreading out your attention over five different subjects" says Kira Beukeboom, a biology

CONSIDER THESE QUESTIONS

Some questions to ask when considering summer school:

- How will grades from summer courses affect my GPA?
- Does my financial aid cover the summer session?
- Do the graduate/professional programs I'm interested in consider whether I take a full course load during the regular school year?
- Can I still make enough money during the remainder of the summer to support myself for the year?

student at the University of Victoria currently completing a summer field study course in environmental restoration.

Beukeboom also says the learning environment as more laid back.

"(You're) not in the midst of a full-on semester. Even the teachers are more relaxed."

There is plenty to ponder when saying yay or nay to summer studies. Either way, it's worth doing some homework to make sure the decision is a well-educated one.

Decision time is upon Redblacks' Desjardins

CFL draft. Ottawa GM mum on who he has pegged with No. 1 pick

While Ottawa Redblacks general manager Marcel Desjardins has entertained some offers for his first overall pick in the CFL draft, he says there's a "relatively good chance" he'll make the pick Tuesday night.

"There has been some (interest) but not a whole lot," Desjardins said Monday.

Desjardins says he knows who he wants to take first overall but is keeping it to himself. One player the Redblacks won't use the top pick on is McGill tackle Laurent Duvernay-Tardif, the top-ranked CIS prospect for the draft who was selected in the sixth round of the NFL draft Saturday by the Kansas City Chiefs.

"As much as he would've been a guy that we probably would've selected, now that he has a commitment from an NFL team there's no reason for us to go in that direction," Desjardins said.

The popular sentiment is if Desjardins keeps the No. 1 pick, he'll use it on Laval centre Pierre Lavertu. The six-foot-three, 300-pound Lavertu finished third in the CFL scouting bureau's season-ending top-15 rankings, and while he might not have the most upside and potential, Lavertu is generally regarded as one of the most pro-ready prospects in the draft.

Drafting Lavertu first overall would address a need for Ottawa after the off-season

Laval centre Pierre Lavertu is thought to be atop the Ottawa Redblacks' draft board going into Tuesday's draft.

LUCAS OLENIUK/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

Centre of attention

If the Redblacks are coveting Pierre Lavertu, they might be well advised to take him No. 1 because the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who have the No. 2 selection, are said to be very interested in the Laval centre.

retirement of veteran Marwan Hage, whom the Redblacks selected in the CFL expansion draft in December from the Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

"Offensive line is a need,

- So much so that if Ottawa does take Lavertu first, the Bombers would then reportedly be willing to deal the second pick to acquire some assets while moving down and selecting a player who could still help them.

no doubt," Desjardins said. "But that doesn't necessarily mean 100 per cent that's what we'll do."

"There's a good chance but everybody talks about a certain number of guys, whether it's those two or three other top prospects. Just because they're being written about and spoken about that doesn't mean we have them graded the same way."

For the first time ever, the CFL draft will be held at night, with the first round broadcast live on TSN. That could give teams more time to talk trade with Desjardins, although the Redblacks GM isn't anticipating a lot of last-minute offers.

"Maybe a little bit but I wouldn't think that dynamic would change," he said.

Premier League

City still playing in United's shadow

Manchester City has deposed its neighbour as Premier League champions for the second time in three years, but is not close to usurping United's global supremacy — both as a football club and as a brand.

Even Premier League officials marked the end of the season by assuring United's owners of the team's enduring power.

"They are the world's largest football club in my view with huge resources, with huge determination and a fantastic fan base," league chief executive Richard Scudamore told Sky Sports television. "Of course their time will come again."

Canada makes Czechs pay for major penalty

Canadian captain Kevin Bieksa had a fat lip but it was worth it.

Canada scored twice on a five-minute major penalty to Jan Kovar for slashing Bieksa, which was enough to build a lead that stood up for a 4-3 victory over the Czech Republic at the world hockey championship on Monday.

Joel Ward, Kyle Turris, Nathan MacKinnon and Morgan Rielly scored for the Canadians, who won their second straight game to improve to 2-0-1 at the tournament. They moved to the top of Group A with seven points.

It looked like the three points would come easily, even after Canada gave up the first goal of the game to Roman Cervenka. But Czech goals by Jiri Novotny and Tomas Hertl midway through the third period made things a little too close for comfort at Chizhovka-Arena in Minsk, Belarus.

Canada was able to hold on because of what they did in the second, when MacKinnon and Rielly scored 17 seconds apart on the power play.

James Reimer, tested with 13 shots in the first period while his teammates mustered just four, was stellar in picking up his first victory of the tournament with 31 saves.

Czech starter Jakub Kovar gave up four goals on 13 shots before getting pulled late in the second period. Alexander Salak punched Alex Burrows in the head only seconds after he entered, but he wasn't a factor much of the rest of the way. THE CANADIAN PRESS
